Health and Safety Information

The Health & Safety Highlights catalog points you to some of the latest reports, studies, federal regulations, guidance, software, and data pertaining to health and safety. Key information products have been selected for this catalog to help those who have a direct interest in federal research or must comply and operate within government procedures and regulations. Some of the leading information sources include: Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Food and Drug Administration, National Institutes of Health, Office of Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, and the Health Care Financing Administration.

About NTIS

The National Technical Information Service is an indispensable resource for government information. The NTIS collection of scientific, technical, engineering, and business-related data contains products in printed, electronic and multimedia format. NTIS – part of the Department of Commerce's Technology Administration – does not rely on taxpayer funds to operate. Instead, all costs associated with collecting, abstracting, indexing, archiving, reproducing, and distributing information from its collection are paid for by the sales of its products and services.

Development of an Adolescent Health Status Measure. Abstract, Executive Summary, Final Report and Appendices A and D.

Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, MD; Sponsored by Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, Rockville, MD, Center for Research Dissemination and Liaison.

1996 107p

Project developed a comprehensive health status measure for selfadministration by adolescents. Specific aims were to assess the internal reliability of the domains developed in preliminary studies of adolescents in schools and clinic facilities. The project was successful in accomplishing its aims and in making available a feasible protocol tool to assess the health of 11-17 year olds across a range of domains on health status. The six domains address healthrelated characteristics including functional status and quality of life. The instrument is designed for selfadministration in both schools and clinical settings and has been tested for reliability and validity.

National School-Based Youth Risk Behavior Study (YRBS), 1995 (for Microcomputers).

Centers for Disease Control, Atlanta, GA. Aug 96 1 diskette

The results from more than 10,000 questionnaires were compiled for the Youth Risk Behavior Surveillance System, an epidemiological surveillance system. The system was established by the CDC to monitor prevalence of youth behaviors that most influence health and contribute most to mortality and morbidity. The 1995 national school-based Youth Risk Behavior Survey is one component of the YRBSS. The YRBS focuses on priority health-risk behaviors established during youth that result in the most significant mortality, morbidity, disability, and social problems during both youth and adulthood. Includes behaviors that result in injuries; tobacco use; alcohol and other drug use; sexual behaviors that result in HIV infection, STD's, and pregnancies; dietary behaviors; and physical activity.

What Works III - Focus on School Health in Urban Communities. 1995 CityMatCH Survey of Urban Maternal and Child Health Programs.

CityMatCH, Omaha, NE; Sponsored by Maternal and Child Health Bureau, Rockville, MD.

1996 232p

Maternal and child health programs in city and county health departments nationwide are key players in the development, assurance, monitoring and assessment of health-related services for urban children and their families. Education and health are natural partners at the local level; this partnership is critical in America's cities. This document builds upon a basic CityMatCH premise that urban health departments have much to learn from each other.

Using Clinical Practice Guidelines to Evaluate Quality of Care. Volume 1. Issues.

Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, Rockville, MD, Center for Research Dissemination and Liaison.

Mar 95 57p

As the U.S. undergoes a restructuring of health care financing and delivery, there is growing interest in issues surrounding quality of care- i.e., how it is defined, evaluated, and how it relates to patient outcomes. A panel of experts was convened to develop a document that would provide a single methodology for using clinical practice guidelines to evaluate quality of health care. Volumes 1 and 2 describe how to translate clinical practice guidelines into evaluation tools and how to determine whether care provided conforms to recommended guidelines. This methodology could have broad utility for a variety of users, including practitioners, providers, and professional organizations.

Collection of Best Practices of Managed Care Organizations. The Results of a Survey by the Health Care Financing Administration Office of Managed Care.

Health Care Financing Administration, Washington, DC., Division of Policy and Evaluation.

1996 132p

The Division of Policy and Evaluation of HCFA mounted this study to identify, document and disseminate practices of some managed care organizations (MCOs) that knowledgeable observers judge to be especially effective, i.e., 'best practices.' MCOs were broadly defined as organizations that integrate the financing and delivery of health care. The design of the study is described in Appendix A. As the MCO Activities Model depicts, the viability of a managed care organization in its fullest form is dependent on its providing the most appropriate health care services in a cost effective manner that results in both optimal clinical outcomes and satisfied members and providers.

General Services Demand Model, Version 1.0 (for Microcomputers).

Health Resources and Services Administration. Rockville. MD.

Dec 95 6 diskettes

General Services Demand Model is a statistically based forecasting model which uses a variety of socioeconomic variables directly associated with the health care system to estimate the future demand for health care services by major health care sector and by state. The model's forecasting capability reaches to the state level of geographic detail which should be of interest to health care service forecasters and planners at the national, regional or state levels. The model also addresses specific health care sectors, e.g. nursing homes. The major benefit offered by this package is that all of the important analytical, statistical and data associated aspects of model development and operation are made available to the user.

Integrated Requirements Model for Primary Care for Physicians, Physicians Assistants (PAs), Nurse Practitioners (NPs), and Certified Nurse-Midwives (CNMs) (for Microcomputers).

Health Resources and Services Administration, Rockville, MD.

1995 2 diskettes

The primary care Integrated Requirements Model forecasts U.S. requirements for physicians, physician assistants, nurse practitioners, and certified nurse-midwives for delivery of primary health care services. The model is pre-loaded to provide estimates for practitioner requirements under six scenarios each associated with assumptions about insurance coverage, managed care penetration and use of non-physician providers. The IRM is designed so that the user can also forecast requirements under an unlimited number of scenarios by varying model inputs and parameters.

National Ambulatory Medical Care Survey, 1994 (on Magnetic Tape).

National Center for Health Statistics, Hyattsville, MD, Division of Health Examination Statistics.

Jul 96 1 magnetic tape National Ambulatory Medical Care Survey provides data on ambulatory medical care rendered at physician's office visits. This a national probability sample survey of visits to the offices of nonfederally employed physicians primarily engaged in office-based, direct patient care, but not in the specialities of anesthesiology, pathology, or radiology. Sample data are weighted to produce national estimates that describe the provision and utilization of ambulatory medical care services in the U.S. In 1994, 1,704 physicians participated in the NAMCS, completing 33,598 patient record forms. The survey collected information on patient, physician, and visit characteristics. Reason for visit and drug data are coded according to classification systems developed specifically for the NAMCS. Diagnosis and procedure data are coded in the International Classification of Diseases, 9th Revision, Clinical Modification (ICD-9-CM) format.

Nutrition

Assessing the Dietary Effects of the Food Stamp Program. Volume 1. Conceptual Design.

Mathematica Policy Research, Inc., Washington, DC; Sponsored by Food, Nutrition and Consumer Services, Alexandria, VA, Office of Analysis and Evaluation. 14 Feb 89 191p

This study is an assessment of the dietary effects of the Food Stamp Program. Volume I is a conceptual design for an analysis of the dietary effects of the FSP, and Volume II presents empirical results from estimation of econometric models of the dietary effects of the FSP. This model is based on the economic theory of consumer demand and relates nutrient levels to the food stamp benefit, cash income, and other household characteristics. The model is estimated with household food use from the 1979-80 Survey of Food Consumption in Low-Income Households. Examines household availability of food energy, protein, vitamin A, vitamin C, thiamin, riboflavin, vitamin B6, calcium, phosphorus, magnesium, and iron.

Preventing and Mitigating AIDS in Sub-Saharan Africa - Research and Data Priorities for the Social and Behavorial Science

National Research Council, Washington, DC, Committee on Population; Agency for International Development, Washington, DC, Bureau for Africa; and Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, New York, NY 1996 370p

The AIDS epidemic in SubSaharan Africa continues to affect all facets of life throughout the subcontinent. Deaths related to AIDS have driven down the life expectancy rate of residents in Zambia, Kenya, and Uganda with far-reaching implications. This book details the current state of the AIDS epidemic in Africa, and lays out what research is needed for possibly more effective prevention programs.

Adverse Events Associated with Childhood Vaccines - Evidence Bearing on Causality.

Institute of Medicine, Washington, DC, Division of Health Promotion and Disease Prevention: Sponsored by National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, Bethesda,

1994 480p

Childhood immunization is one of the major public health measures of the 20th century. However, some parents and health professionals are questioning the safey of vaccines because of the occurrence of rare adverse events after immunization. This document provides the most thorough literature review available about links between common childhood vaccines— tetanus, diphtheria, measles, mumps, polio, haemophilus influenzae b, and hepatitis B—and specific types of disorders or death. The authors discuss approaches to evidence and causality and examines the consequencesneurologic and immunologic disorders and death—linked with immunization.

Discussion also includes background information on the development of the vaccines and details about the case reports, clinical trials, and other evidence associating each vaccine with specific disorders.

Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS) (Historic), January 1, 1994 - December 31, 1994 (for Microcomputers).

Food and Drug Administration, Rockville, MD, Center for Biologics Evaluation and Research.

1994 2 diskettes

This data set contains information releasable under the Freedom of Information Act from reports submitted to the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System from Jan 1, 1994 - Dec 31, 1994 to the present. The National Childhood Vaccine Injury Act of 1986 (NCVIA) requires health care providers and vaccine manufacturers to report to the Department of Health and Human Services specific adverse events following the administration of those vaccines outlined in the Act. DHHS established VAERS, which is coadministered by the FDA and CDC, to accept reports of suspected adverse events, in all age groups, after the administration of any U.S. licensed vaccine. The database serves as an early warning system for adverse events not detected during pre-market testing.

Regulatory Information - FDA

Device Experience Network (DEN) -Medical Device Reporting (MDR) Data and Manufacturer's Disclaimer File (on magnetic tape).

Food and Drug Administration, Silver Spring, MD, Center for Devices and Radiological Health.

31 Mar 90 mag tape

The Device Experience Network is divided into two distinct files, the Product Problem Reporting Program and the Medical Device Reporting Program. Both files collect information on defective or potentially defective medical devices which are already on the market; however, each file has a slightly different focus because it collects the data from different sources. MDR is a regulation enacted by Congress on December 13, 1984. An MDR report is designated by a 6digit access number. Each manufacturer has attached to its reports a disclaimer which absolves them from any liability concerning the report. Data that is available includes: access number, date report received, product name, manufacturer name, city, state and zip, model and catalog numbers, and event description.

Instructions for Completing Form 3500A (Specific to Medical Device Reporting) with Coding Manual for Form 3500A.

Food and Drug Administration, Rockville, MD, Center for Devices and Radiological Health.

14 Dec 95 86p

The FDA has established the final reporting requirements for Device User Facilities and Manufacturers under the revised Medical Device Reporting Regulation, 21 CFR, Part 803. The final reporting requirements for Distributors are contained in 21 CFR, Part 804. These regulations enact a uniform system for the submission of reports of deaths, serious injuries and certain malfunctions associated with the use of medical devices. These reports must be submitted to the FDA and/or the manufacturer on FDA Form 3500A (MedWatch form). The FDA has developed this guidance document to assist User Facilities, Distributors and Manufacturers in complying with the requirements established in Parts 803 and 804 when completing applicable sections of Form 3500A. The Coding Manual for Form 3500A is also included, and it contains instructions for proper identification and utilization of the adverse event and manufacturer evaluation codes which must be provided when filling out certain sections of Form 3500A.

Medical Device Reporting - An Overview.

Food and Drug Administration, Rockville, MD, Center for Devices and Radiological Health.

Apr 96 26p

This document is intended to help manufacturers and user facilities understand the basic requirements for reporting adverse events involving medical devices as required by the Medical Device Reporting Regulation (Title 21, Code of Federal Regulations, Part 803). The final MDR rule, which was published in the Federal Register on December 11, 1995, becomes effective on July 31, 1996. This document is to be used to supplement but not to replace the MDR regulation. The MDR regulation will take precedence over this document in resolving any conflict between them.

Medical Device Reporting for Manufacturers.

Food and Drug Administration, Rockville, MD, Center for Devices and Radiological Health.

4 May 96 65p

This guidance for manufacturers is one of the three documents written for a particular audience: User Facilities, Manufacturers, and Distributors. The Safe Medical Devices Act of 1990 imposed significant new reporting requirements on the medical device industry and users of medical devices. This guidance document is based on the final Medical Device Reporting rule which was published in the Dec 11, 1995, Federal Register. The final rule also addresses changes mandated by the Medical Device Amendments of 1992.

Medical Device Reporting for Distributors.

Food and Drug Administration, Rockville, MD, Center for Devices and Radiological Health.

Apr 96 27p

This guidance is directed to distributors of domestic and imported medical devices. FDA is requiring medical device distributors to report deaths and serious injuries that are attributed to medical devices. Distributors are also required to report certain device malfunctions and to submit an annual report to FDA to certify the number of medical device reports filed during the preceding year (or that no reports were filed). The Medical Device Reporting regulation provides a mechanism for FDA to identify and monitor significant adverse events involving medical devices so that problems may be detected and corrected in a timely manner. These reports enable FDA to protect the public health by helping to ensure that devices are not adulterated or misbranded and are otherwise safe and effective for their intended use.

Medical Device Reporting for User Facilities.

Food and Drug Administration, Rockville, MD, Center for Devices and Radiological Health.

Apr 96 33p

In 1990, Congress enacted the Safe Medical Devices Act to increase the information that the FDA and manufacturers receive about serious problems with medical devices. A 1986 General Accounting Office study showed that hospitals reported less than one percent of problems with medical devices and, the more serious the problem with a medical device, the less likely it was to be reported. A GAO follow-up study in 1989 concluded that despite full implementation of the Medical Device Reporting regulation, serious underreporting still existed. Under SMDA, device user facilities and manufacturers must report deaths and serious injuries to which a device has or may have caused or contributed, and must establish and maintain adverse event files. A device user facility is defined as a hospital, an ambulatory surgical facility, a nursing home, an outpatient treatment facility, or an outpatient diagnostic facility which is not a physician's office.

MedWatch Mandatory Reports from the Device Experience Network (DEN)

Food and Drug Administration, Rockville, MD, Center for Devices and Radiological Health.

1996 Open series

The report is a computer-generated listing of medical device problem reports that have been reported by medical device manufacturers to the Device Experience Network's Medical Device Reporting program. The reports are arranged by 19 specific medical specialty areas, such as anesthesiology, cardiovascular, or clinical chemistry, within each area by product. Each report is divided into six parts: manufacturer name; product name; model number; report date; accession number; and report text. The text provides a concise description of the device problem and the action recommended or taken by the user, manufacturer, and/or the FDA. Hospitals, health care professionals, and device manufacturers are using the report to identify potential or actual device problems that have occurred or may occur in the health care environment.

Medicare Renal Dialysis Facility Manual (HCFA PUB. 29 through Revision 71, March 1996).

Health Care Financing Administration, Baltimore, MD.

Mar 96 197p

The manual is intended for use by nonhospital operated renal dialysis facilities, which were included in references to 'limited care facilities' in interim program instructions. These facilities may be located on or off the hospital (provider) premises and are engaged in furnishing maintenance dialysis services to established patients. In those instances were a nonhospital operated renal dialysis facility is located on the hospital premises, the administration of the facility must be separate from that of the hospital. Medicare approved nonhospital operated facilities are assigned identification numbers within the range of 2500-2599. Approved renal dialysis facilities that are hospital operated must use the instructions that are included in the Medicare Hospital Manual (HIM-10), rather than these instructions.

Now Available on Subscription National Correct Coding Policy Manual for Part B Medicare Carriers, First Edition, 1997 (Version 3.0)

This edition incorporates into the previous edition (Version 2.3) all code changes instituted by the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) through December 31, 1996. To ensure full and appropriate compensation when filing claims from January 1 to March 31 of 1997, providers should use the codes contained in this new edition. Accordingly, the Second Edition will incorporate all code changes that occur through March 31 and should be used when filing claims from April 1 to June 30. To always have the latest available codes, you can subscribe to the manual—or any of its single chapters, except Chapter I—through the National Technical Information Service, a non-appropriated Federal agency and HCFA's authorized distributor of the manual.

Each chapter is organized by CPT coding for medical procedures and services, except for Chapter I which covers general correct coding policies. Chapter I and the introduction to the manual are also included in each chapter service to make those services more practical to use. All chapters and the manual also include HCPCS Level II codes under the Part B Carriers' jurisdiction.

The Social Security Act mandates the application of minimum health and safety standards which must be met by providers and suppliers participating in the Medicare and Medicaid programs. However, there are differences in the programs which are significant in determining whether the providers and suppliers may participate in one program or both. This manual is designed to instruct hospitals, skilled nursing facilities, home health agencies, independent clinical laboratories, suppliers of portable x-ray services and other suppliers and providers of services on the requirements necessary to participate in the Medicare and/or Medicaid program.

Fetal Alcohol Syndrome -Diagnosis, Epidemiology, Prevention, and Treatment.

Sponsored by Institute of Medicine, Washington, DC, Committee to Study Fetal Alcohol Syndrome; National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, Bethesda, MD.

1996 215p

In the 20 years since it was first described in medical literature, fetal alcohol syndrome has proven to be a stubborn problem, with consequences as serious as those of the more widely publicized crack babies. This report discusses FAS and other possibly alcohol-related effects from two broad perspectives: diagnosis and surveillance, and prevention and treatment. Includes several real-life vignettes of FAS children. Examines the current state of knowledge about medical research, therapeutic interventions, education efforts, and family support programs.

Implementation Guidelines for Alcohol and Drug Regulations in Highway Transportation.

Battelle, Columbus, OH, Transportation Systems; Federal Highway Administration, Washington, DC, Office of Motor Carriers. Jul 96 328p

These guidelines will assist employers in developing or modifying alcohol and controlled substances testing programs that satisfy Federal Highway Administration regulations. The regulations were published in the Federal Register on February 15, 1994, and March 8, 1996, as Controlled Substances and Alcohol Use and Testing (49 CFR Part 382). They will also assist employers in complying with requirements of the Department of Transportation regulation, Procedures for Transportation Workplace Drug and Alcohol Testing Programs (49 CFR Part 40). These guidelines are the FHWA Small Entity Compliance Guide for purposes of the Contract With America Advancement Act of 1996 (Pub. L. 104-121, Title III, Subtitle A, March 29, 1996).

National Drug Control Strategy - 1996.

Office of National Drug Control Policy, Washington, DC.

1996 103p

The National Drug Control Strategy organizes a collective U.S. effort to achieve a common purpose— to reduce illegal drug use and its consequences in America. The Strategy provides general guidance and specific direction to the efforts of the more than 50 federal agencies involved in the struggle against illegal drugs and substance abuse. It offers a framework to state and local government agencies, educators and health professionals, law enforcement officials, community groups, religious organizations, media, and business to build a unified counterdrug effort.

National Pregnancy and Health Survey. Drug Use among Women Delivering Livebirths - 1992.

Westat, Inc., Rockville, MD; Sponsored by National Institute on Drug Abuse, Rockville, MD, Division of Epidemiology and Prevention Research.

1996 423p

The report provides extensive information on the prevalence and patterns of prenatal use of common illicit drugs, alcohol, and cigarettes among women delivering live-born infants in the U.S. during a 12-month period. Study estimates number of women who used selected substances during their lifetime and in specific time periods over 12 months preceding delivery. Examines patterns of substance use by race/ethnic group, age, and other characteristics of the mother. Findings stem from a survey of a national probability sample of women delivering live births in hospitals within the contiguous 48 States. Approximately 4,000,000 women deliver live-born infants annually in the U.S., with 99% delivering in hospitals.
